

Contents

Editorial Preface — V

Hans Feger

Preface – Teaching Chinese Philosophy in Europe — 1

I. Teaching Daoist Philosophy

Selusi Ambrogio

Experiences of Learning, Teaching, and Investigating Chinese Philosophy in Europe — ■

Liu Tsang-long

Zhuangzi as Educator: Spectatorial Engagement and Transcultural Understanding for Global Citizenship — ■

Mieke Matthyssen

Teaching Chinese Philosophy Outside the Philosophy Classroom: Reflections on Contents, Methods, and Prospects — ■

Qingjie James Wang, Sai Hang Kwok

From “Being and Time” to “Dao and Time” — ■

II. Teaching Confucian Philosophy

Xiangchen Sun

How to Interpret Chinese Philosophy to the West—My Experience of Teaching Chinese Philosophy at Freie Universität Berlin — ■

Jana S. Rošker

Teaching through Sublation: Political and Philosophical Confucianism — ■

Geir Sigurðsson

Engaging with Li 禮 in the European Philosophy Classroom — ■

L'ubomír Dunaj

A Few Reflections from Central Europe on Teaching Chinese Philosophy — ■

Ivana Buljan

Teaching Chinese Philosophy in Zagreb: From a “Skill-Based” to a “Thinking Through Early Chinese Philosophy” Approach — ■

Karl-Heinz Pohl

The Teaching of “Chinese Philosophy” in Sinology Studies — ■

Heiner Roetz

Look Back in Anger? Chinese Philosophy at Ruhr University Bochum — ■

III. Teaching Chinese Buddhist Philosophy

Hans-Rudolf Kantor

Buddhism as Philosophy: Exercise in Observing Observation: The Nonduality of Paradoxical and Representational Thinking in Chinese Buddhism — ■

Friederike Assandri

Ideas, Labels, and Boxes – The Three Teachings in Cheng Xuanying’s Early Tang Commentary to the Laozi and Some Reflections on our Scholarly Explorations of the Three Teachings — ■

IV. Miscellaneous

Tze-wan Kwan

Die Bildung abstrakter Begriffe in archaischen chinesischen Schriften: Humboldt’sche Perspektiven — ■

Tze-wan Kwan

Chinesische Sprache und Schrift in philosophischer und kulturübergreifender Sicht—ein Vorlesungsplan — ■

Bio-Bibliography — ■

Name Index — ■