

Course Announcement for WS 2014/15 (LV 17455)

Are you the next Shakespeare? Or maybe you're just curious how theater is created? Now's your chance to find out...

Sign up for THEATER PROJECT

A special course offered in the Institute for English Philology in WS 2014/15 by theater artist John Crutchfield.

This course is open to any student interested in collaborating on the creation of new, English-language theatrical performance. Participants will gain first-hand experience in writing, adapting, developing, rehearsing, staging, producing and performing. Our project for the semester is to create an original theatrical work, which we will present in a public performance.

No previous experience in theater is necessary. The only requirements are proficiency in English, a desire to work creatively and collaboratively, and an openness to the volatile, transformative experience of doing theater.
